MEMORIAL

Evidence of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's eloquent words, military deeds and administrative accomplishments during the half century of his service to America have been permanently enshrined at Norfolk, Va.

There the MacArthur memorial, a stately old courthouse renovated by the city at half a million dollar cost, is the final resting place of the five star general, and the depository for his personal effects, his military decorations, and his papers. It has become a highly popular tourist attraction.

Prominent among the exhibits in the memorial building are the general's dark eyeglasses, his distinctive hat and his corn-cob pipe.

MacArthur's battle flags grace the walls of the rotunda and surround the crypt in which lie two tombs. One (at left) contains the general's body. Mrs. MacArthur will be buried in the other.

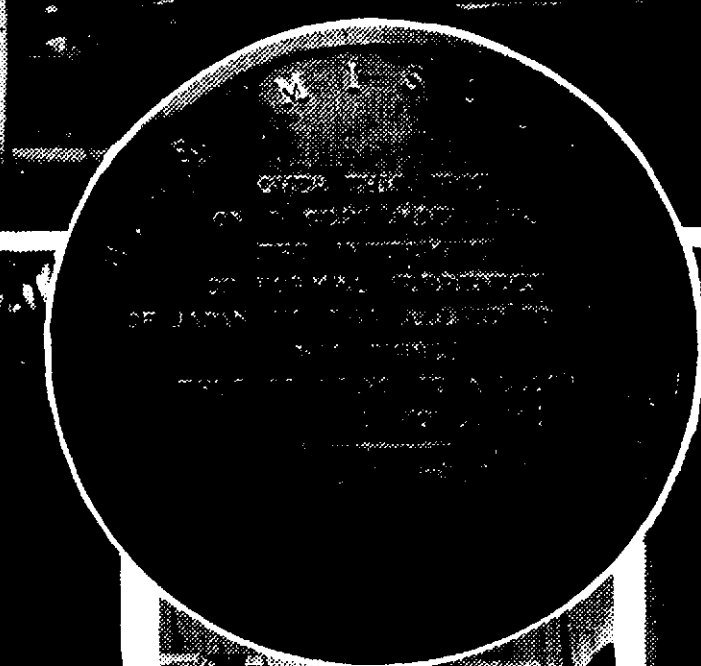

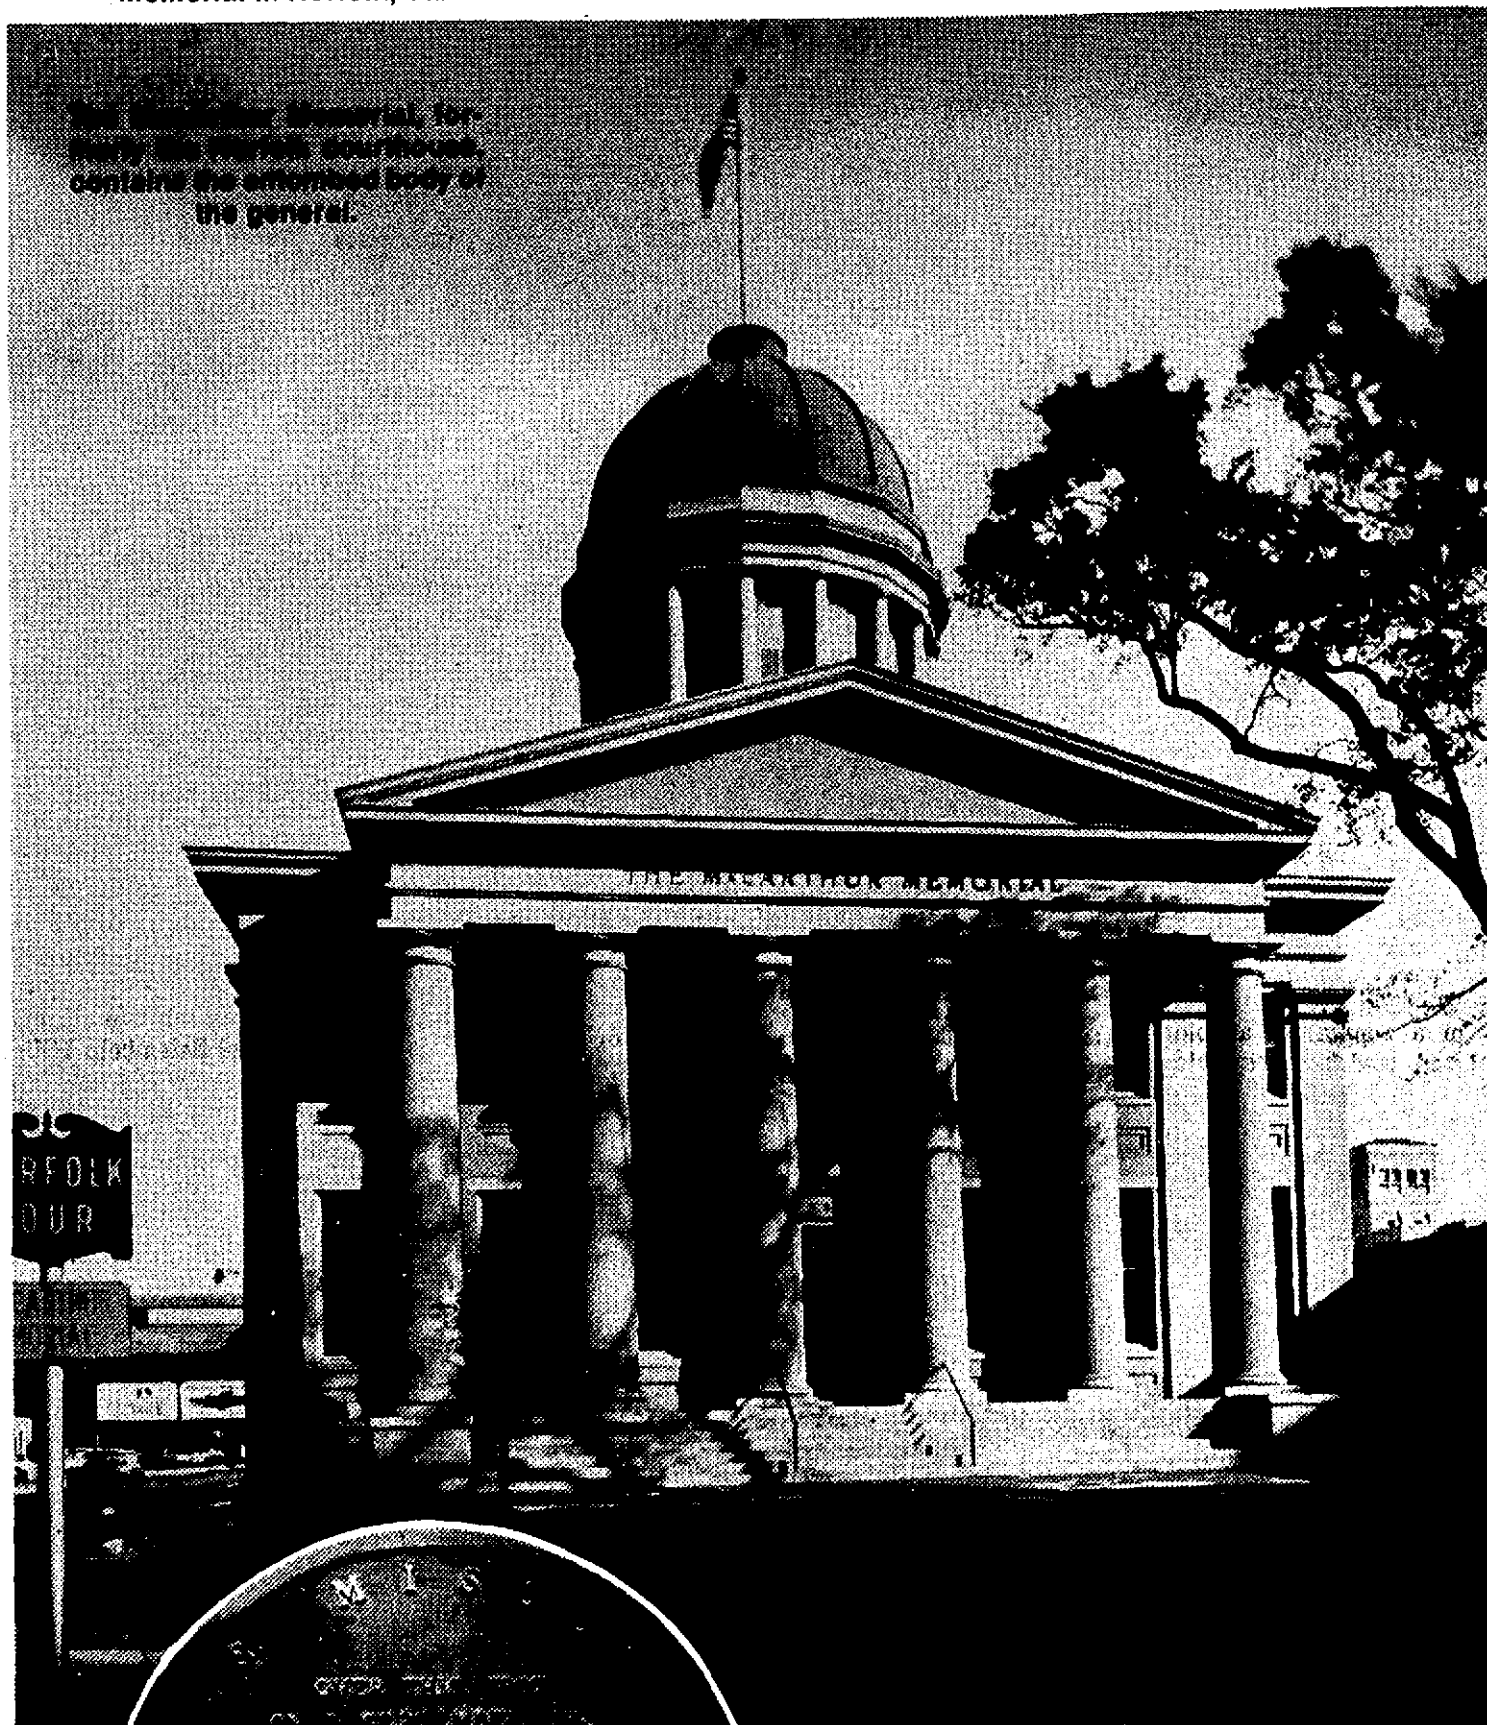

This portrait of MacArthur was painted in 1946 by Filipino artist Garcia Llamas.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's widow and son, Arthur, place a wreath above his tomb in the MacArthur Memorial in Norfolk, Va.

A group of visitors from the Philippines pause at the crypt in which Gen. MacArthur is entombed.

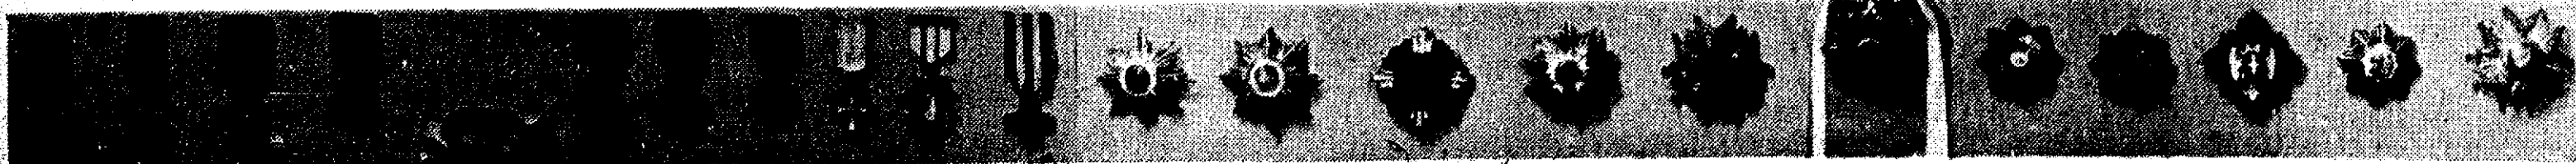

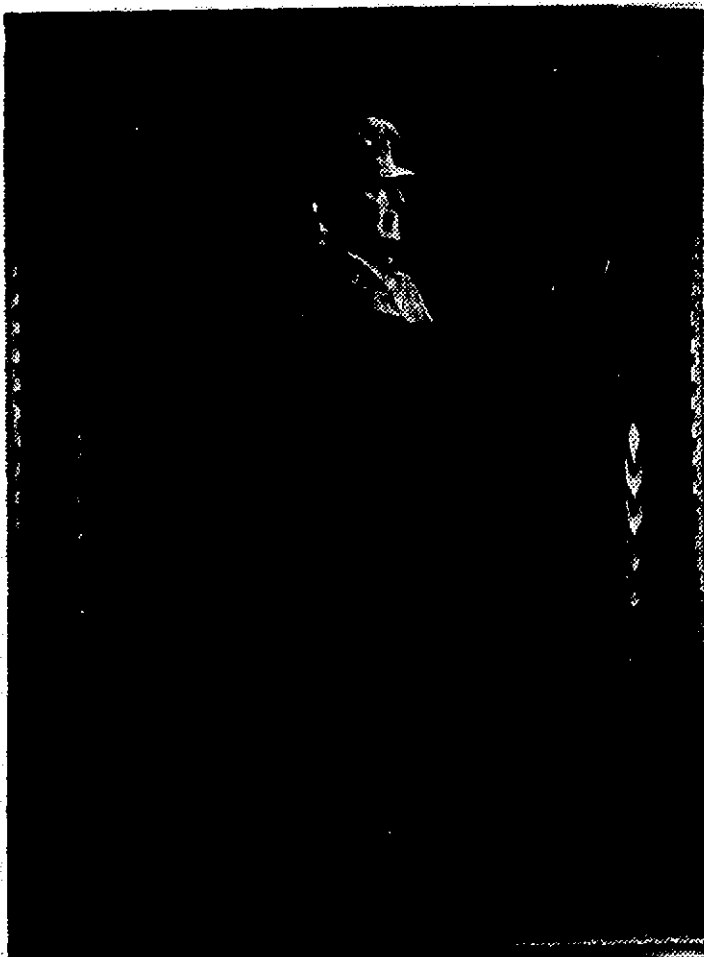

Youngsters examine a duplicate of the plaque aboard the battleship Missouri commemorating the Japanese surrender. (Plaque is shown in inset above.)

Alton Tobey, left, of Larchmont, N. Y., artist who painted six murals for the MacArthur Memorial in Norfolk, stands beneath one of the murals with Samuel T. Northern, director of the Memorial.

Mrs. Edwin Ward opened the meeting with Prayer.
Business followed in regular order, by the leader, Mrs. Chas. Wilson, with the various committees making reports.
Mrs. E.P. Young had charge of the program. She read the words of a Song from an old Hymnal and used from the Bible a very familiar Psalm which carried the same theme.
The pledges and dues were collected by the treasurer, Mrs. H. O. Kyler, Jr.
Coffee and cake were served by the hostess during the social hour.

Recipe for Cooking That Black Bear

By JIM HOWARD
MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Riddle: what do you soak in brine, mixed spices, lemon juice and vinegar 24 hours, then bake in buckwheat honey and blackberry wine and roast for nearly five hours?

Answer: black bear.
There are many other ways of preparing West Virginia's state animal for a feast. The Rev. Joe Gluck, part-time pastor of the 192-year-old Fork-of-Cheat Baptist Church near Stewartstown, six miles north of here, can verify that.

When he and his congregation of 60 asked for "the makin's" of a bear feast to celebrate the 192nd anniversary of their church next Sunday, they were quickly assured they could have a 275-pound sow bruin.

But the congregation had to advertise for a recipe to renew the church's traditional anniversary bear feast.

The church probably collected enough culinary advice in the past ten days to provide a different-tasting bear-feast for several anniversaries.

"We were buried with bear recipes," said the Rev. Mr. Gluck.

And he's gotten a kick out of reading them. Nearly all the recipes included instructions for marinating, or pickling the bear meat. But the duration of the soaking varied from two weeks to as little as 25 minutes.

The ingredients of the pickling and basting juices were different in most of the recipes. One was footnoted his instructions with this advice: "After properly pickling bear for 24 hours and basting for another five hours, throw out the meat and serve the juice."

The Rev. Mr. Gluck said those who had tasted bear meat say either, "It's horrible," or it's "the best wild game ever put on a table." There apparently aren't many "middle-of-the-road" bear eaters.

Life In Arkansas

By TOMMY YATES
Associated Press Writer

After a one-year layoff, the Terrapin Derby at Lepanto was resumed last week to regain its place as one of the oldest events of its type in the mid-South.

Some 1,000 persons turned out in the hot July sun to witness the 28th running of the event, which in one year had as many as 2,500 turtles crawling around.

The event wasn't held last year because the area people were busy with their crops, but the layoff failed to cool the spirits for last week's derby. Jointly sponsored by the American Legion and Lions Club, the derby was limited to 100 turtles. It used to be that a turtle would be entered for every ticket sold, but this year the 1,500 tickets sold were placed in a barrel and 100 were drawn to compete.

The turtles were dumped in the middle of a 100-foot stretch of ground. They could go 50 feet in either of two directions, being kept on a straight path by siderails, and the first to cross the 50-foot mark was the winner.

Some of the turtles failed to cover the distance, of course, despite the cheers and urgent pleas of the ticket holders and those bold enough to wager a side bet.

But a fast stepper called Danny Boy dashed across the 50-foot marker first to claim the $200 first prize for John Maxwell of Skiesoon, Mo.

Crawling furiously toward the finish line in the other direction was Razorback, who got the $100 second prize for R. E. Donham of Lake Village. Third place went to Pill-Roller, which was running on a ticket held by John Wayne, a Lepanto druggist.

Danny Boy proved that he was clearly the class of the field as he won the derby in a time of less than eight minutes, one of the best ever recorded in the vent.

The exact winning time was not known because someone forgot to bring the clock — or they either got tired of watching the second hand.

RETURN OF THE '30s and '40s is evident in a fashion release from London, birthplace of the miniskirt. Bulky trouser legs, black shirts and wide silk ties stage a comeback in men's suits, only this time they're on the girls. In contrast to the minidress were two creations right, featuring a demure look and mid-calf hemlines.

LOVE WON'T WASH OUT

Dear Helen: I went to a concert of my favorite singing group. Afterwards, they started walking toward their dressing room and, as they passed, I touched the one I truly love. From that moment, I promised myself never to wash that hand. It's been two days already.

My mother is now insisting that I wash my hand, instead of just wiping it off and preserving the "touch." What shall I do? — FRANTIC FAN

Dear F. F.: How about making an ink fingerprint of the "touch" for your scrapbook? And then you can do dishes two-handed! — H

Understanding. Our house is most always filled with teens, and Dad thrives on it. He's respected by all for his fairness and unselfishness — and he's fun!

Of course our mother had to be just as nice, to get him.

I hope you'll print this even if it's past Father's Day, as we're thankful for him every day of the year. — ONE OF THE LUCKY ONES

Dear Helen: When a girl talks you into going too far against your will and then gets pregnant, are you still responsible for half the bills? — D.S.

Dear D: Why not? You're half to blame, and it evidently didn't take much "talking." — H

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-Television Writer HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The more avid movie fans long have displayed a reluctance to allow their favorites to grow up. Many followers of Judy Garland still see her as the wide-eyed Dorothy of "Wizard of Oz" searching over the rainbow, rather than as a woman with more than the usual troubles of middle age.

Likewise those who have followed the career of Hayley Mills — you loved her in "Parent Trap," thrilled to her in "Summer Magic" — will find trouble adjusting to the new image in which she has cast herself, on and off the screen.

Hayley visited here after a six-city tour in which she exhibited her new self. Significantly, she has been accompanied by the coproducer-director, with his twin brother John, of her latest film, Roy Boulting, with whom she is unabashedly in love. This, despite the facts that he is 53 and still married.

"The divorce has been going on for four long years," remarked Hayley, who recently turned 21. "Such things move

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mary Margaret McBride, after more than two decades as radio's first lady operating out of New York City, now lives 100 miles from the city, presides over a three-times weekly local radio show on Kingston's WGHQ, writes an occasional book and for a couple of hours a day visits with some electronic friends. Here she makes her annual report on the goings-on among the washtub weepers.

By MARY MARGARET MCBRIDE
For Cynthia Lowry
WEST SHOKAN, N.Y. (AP) — Until just recently I was vis-very slowly in England." "As for our future plans, I can't say, really," added Boulting, a slender man with hair combed over his forehead, Beale style.

"If I were to say I can scarcely wait to be divorced so I can marry Hayley, it might very well prejudice my case. The British courts are funny that way; they like to make the final determination."

The new film, "The Family Way," also seems likely to upset the Hayley Mills fans. She has gone the way of all flesh for actresses nowadays. The film features a controversial scene in which she steps out of a bathtub and is viewed from the rear. The sequence almost caused "The Family Way" to be condemned by the National Catholic Office for Motion Pictures.

Boulting said that he had received "an impassioned telephone call" from a Warner Bros. executive, importuning him to come to New York and discuss the matter with the Catholic officials. The director was told that the 70-odd reviewers for the group thought the film was excellent, yet it could not be passed because of strictures against nudity in films.

"Then I suggest you return to your bishops and have them change the rules against nudity; I will not take out the scene," declared Boulting after due consultation.

Later he was notified that the condemned rating had been changed to "recommended for adults with reservations."

Hayley expects the new film to remove forever "the Pollyanna-Walt Disney" aura which has marked her career.

"After all, one can't go on playing young girls forever," she reasoned, "and there are so many exciting parts for girls in their 20s nowadays."

ited regularly, five days a week, by a young woman charged with pushing her mother down a flight of stairs and breaking her neck. I don't see her so much now that she's been acquitted by a jury.

Another of my daily visitors was in trouble — she was about to have what used to be called a fatherless child. Then along came a nice young fellow who knew all but married her anyway. She had the baby — every one thought it was the nice young man's — and promptly was overwhelmed with such guilt feelings that she couldn't be a good wife or proper mother.

Just when things seemed darkest, she got a job in the office of a pediatrician, was exposed to a lot of babies, and before I could say "detergent" she made an adjustment to her unwanted child and the marriage was saved.

Quick changes like this don't happen everywhere. All of my troubled callers are among the sorely beset characters in the four daytime serials that have become part of my life in the years since I left New York to survey this turbulent globe from the serenity of a mountain-side home in the Catskills.

Life in the soap operas, so full of drama, anguish and terrible events, has made me feel that I inhabit a humdrum world. Maybe my neighbors suffer, but they do it quietly, not with the noisy desperation of my television friends. And, I must say, people I know seldom announce suddenly that they are moving to France or Timbuctu, then depart, never to be heard of again.

However, those of us who are hard-core soap opera fans have come to understand these sudden comings and goings. Long before the nasty mother fell or was pushed down that flight of stairs, it seemed pretty obvious that she would have to be got rid of somehow. The actress playing the part, I decided, had made other plans — a film job or perhaps a summer stock tour called her.

Young mothers with only children for company most of the day react to the soaps as they would to a kaffeeklatch with mothers, mothers-in-law and next door neighbors in another day. And certainly there is more excitement in even the tamest daytime serial than in the liveliest local gossip.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

1967 BIGGEST JOB SUMMER EVER: The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has just reported to us that an estimated 3.5 million of you will be hard at summer work through until Labor Day. 100,000 more summer jobs available for guys and girls than last year at this time. Want to add a job to a present job or shake out of that lousy mood and get work? Now that we've hit mid-summer weeks, experts advise the best bet is to look in your own back yard... both onbeat and offbeat opportunities are rife there. For instance, the New Canaan, Conn., Woman's Club, experienced since 1964 in running a program steering teens to local summer jobs, counsels: Look first, if you're a girl, for jobs as a mother's helper (housefuls of these around)... if you're a boy, yard work (neighborhoods full of these). Typical other girl jobs are—office work, camp work, waitress, clerk, salad girl (tossing them together), candy girl (in a theater). Similar guy job opportunities likely to be around are—odd jobs, restaurant jobs, store jobs, boys companion, lockerroom work, lifeguard, office work... Well, this gives you some ideas from just one community. Try your own.

WHY MOSQUITOES LOVE YOU: Whining, dive-bomber biter mosquitoes persist despite modern extermination methods. Not only are you young and tastier—there are other reasons why you may be their favorite morsel. Scientific research of the last few years shows that if mosquitoes bite you bitterly this vacation, you are likely to be one (or all) of these—darker-complexioned, warmer-skinned, bristling with good health, perspiring moderately, breathing heavily and highly active, wearing dark clothing, or perfumed, cologned or lotioned. Sad fact is that the male mosquito lives only about a week, meekly sips only plant sap... so that mosquito that loves you so ferociously—is a female.

DEEP FREEZE THAT DISTRESSING NOSEBLEED: Adolescence is a likely period for unexpected, erratic, frequent nosebleeds. The new, low temperature medical therapy—turning up startling and successful treatments in a wide range of health uses—now recommends an ingenious technique for slipping a small balloon up the nostril, then inflating it gently with a below freezing liquid—this chill right on the spot stops the stubbornest nosebleeds in five or six minutes.

SWIMMING, "TENTS," BUGS FOR SIX MILLION: About a century ago, Frederick William Gunn, founder of the Gunnery School at Milford, Conn., several weeks after his school classes ended, rounded up some of the boys he taught and trotted them off to rough it in the country for two weeks of summer vacation (... called it "Camp Comfort"). This was in 1861 and that's how the idea for summer camps was born. It's grown from an eccentric idea to a whopping fact—six million younger Americans will greet nature in almost 11,000 camps, this summer... and, since the average camp ages run 6 to 16, large slugs of teens will sleep in hard bunks, crowd mosquito-netted dining halls. In addition, there are many special camps just for teens. Now all 50 states are speckled with camps... the largest number dotting New England (31 per cent), next the North Central states (29 per cent), the Southeast (22 per cent) and the West (18 per cent). Maybe you'll be camp incarcerated this summer or maybe not, but just listen to this only partial list of the kinds you can flee away to (or sometimes be counselor in)—athletic, foreign language, music, dramatic, nature, riding, sailing, science, trip, travel, tutoring, work, day, church, school, family, disadvantaged (all-male like asthma, speech defects, crippled, blind, emotionally disturbed, retarded)... and then, finally, there are the regular camps, still pretty much like the ones—pop and mom went to.

Downs, Sun Rise Together

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—It was the time of day referred to by Sky Masterson in "Guys and Dolls" as "a couple of deals before dawn." New York's Central Park was serene in the half-light and the Manhattan traffic was still dozing.

In a large, comfortable apartment overlooking the park, Hugh Downs was dressed in his well-tailored, go-to-work clothes. He had risen at 4:15 a.m. and was having a second cup of coffee before heading for the NBC studios for a two-hour stint before the cameras for the daily Today show.

"You know, during the days with Jack Paar I would have said I was a night person," Hugh told a visitor who was going to follow him for the day. "Then, abruptly I took on this schedule. It took me three weeks to adjust, but I did it by brute force. I'm up at 4:15 every day and I go to bed by 9 p.m. On weekends I find I am able to sleep to some jolly hour like 5:45 a.m."

He generally arrives at the studio by 6 a.m., where he is made up, has more coffee, rehearses commercials and discusses the technical aspects of the programs with crewmen.

"When I was first on, I did all my homework about the day's guests the night before. Now I assimilate it earlier and reabsorb it the morning of the show. It seems horrendous to be on 10 hours a week, but it's not. Originally, I thought I must have expertise in every field. Now I know all I really need is enough knowledge to ask naive questions. I see my role as a representative of the people on the other side of the screen."

Barbara Walters, while Hugh was on the air, said, "I have never heard him unkind. I have never seen him lose his temper. He is the nicest, kindest man to work with. This doesn't mean he is unfeeling. I can tell when he is upset about something. But he doesn't inflict his feelings on other people."

As soon as Hugh finished his Today stint, he took an elevator upstairs, went into a small radio studio and spent the next hour recording 10 "World of Travel" spots, each lasting 3½ minutes.

By 10 o'clock, Hugh was seated in the office of Al Morgan, producer of Today, discussing plans for future shows, including several remotes.

By 10:45 he was in the studio where Concentration was due to be taped from 11 to 11:30. He wandered down into the audience to ask if they had any questions. A little girl raised her hand.

"How can you go to the powder room while the show is on the air?" she asked. The audience's laughter made it unnecessary for Hugh to answer.

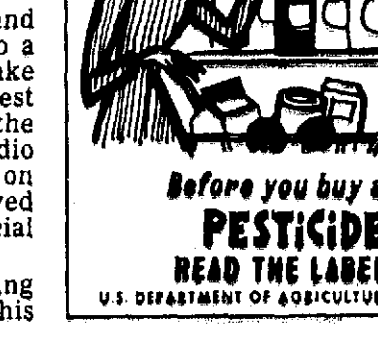

The show went on and Hugh asked, as a lead-in to a commercial, "Want to make your kitchen the brightest room in your house?" As the microphones in the studio were cut he said, "Set it on fire," and the audience stayed happy until the commercial was over.

By 11:30, Hugh's working day was over. But not his activity. As a tired reporter gave up the ghost, Hugh got into a car to drive to an airport in New Jersey to catch a plane to Allentown, Pa., where he had a test for a multi-engine airplane license. He planned to eat a sandwich in the car.

"I'll be back in my apartment about 6 tonight and have dinner with my kids. After that, I expect to sleep soundly."

THE HORROR OF PARTY BEACH

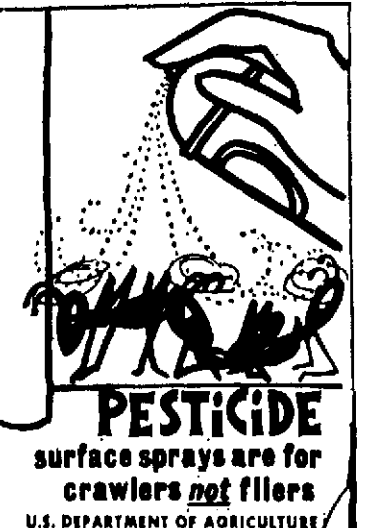

BARBS

Toting up the recent holiday highway toll makes one wonder if the holiday should have been named the "goriest" 4th.

Leaving the hot dogs in the refrigerator is just about the worst thing to find out at the picnic site 20 miles away.

LIFE AHEAD

Only four years have passed, but what lies ahead?
Will this be a life of service to God and country... or will it be bleak, full of dissipation and sin?
Parents — the job is yours! Financial security is good, but don't stop there. Much more than a life is at stake — there is a soul to be reconciled, to be guided. Then tend him, nurture him — for "A child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." Prov. 29:15.
Remember, his life will only be a projection of yours. Let us help make it a "Good Life Ahead."

You In The Church
The Church In You
— form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs
the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.

Ministers of all faiths and the community-minded firms below persuade you to read this Spiritual Values page and make it a part of your life... it is your heritage.

of soldiers in Vietnam regarding race relations.

food debris. Her gums bled at slightest contact and her teeth decayed at an astonishing rate. Porcelain fillings seemed to melt away. Silver amalgam fillings fared somewhat better although tooth structure around them rapidly broke down with decay.
The rapid surge of decay and gum trouble seemed to coincide with dryness of mouth.
While all 10 million people medicated with Thorazine may not experience such severe dryness of mouth, this side reaction is sufficiently important to be called to the attention of all who use it so that their dental problems, which are now better understood, can be prevented or at least minimized. Of basic importance to these people is:

1. Exercise good mouth hygiene; i.e. brush teeth, gums and top of tongue after every time you eat.
2. Visit your dentist frequently for prophylaxis and restorative treatment.
3. Avoid constantly bathing teeth in sugar (sucking hard candies, lifesavers, etc.) in order to stimulate flow of saliva.
4. Inform your dentist of your drug intake so he can advise you of any special treatment needed, and also prescribe a drug to counteract dryness.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Tranquilizer's Effects On Teeth and Gums

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Diana B. was an intensely hysterical young woman, with chronic schizophrenic reaction, and with severe dental problems not altogether related to her phobic fear of dentistry.

It's said that when a psychiatrist meets a mildly hysterical woman, he's apt to marry her; when he meets a moderately hysterical one, he's apt to treat her; and when he meets an intensely hysterical one, he runs.

But no one ran from Diana.
She was treated according to the most advanced methods of psychotherapy. An important part of her regimen included daily doses, for a prolonged period of time, of a drug which helped relieve her symptoms. This drug is chlorpromazine, more commonly known as Thorazine, which is a widely used tranquilizer. It's estimated that in the United States alone over 10 million people use Thorazine daily.

Some tranquilizers are of direct interest in dentistry because one of their side reactions is dryness of mucous membrane in all parts of the body, with specially damaging effects in the mouth.

Diana's mouth was constantly dry, her tongue parched, her gums, tongue and teeth caked with dried

SHORT RIBS

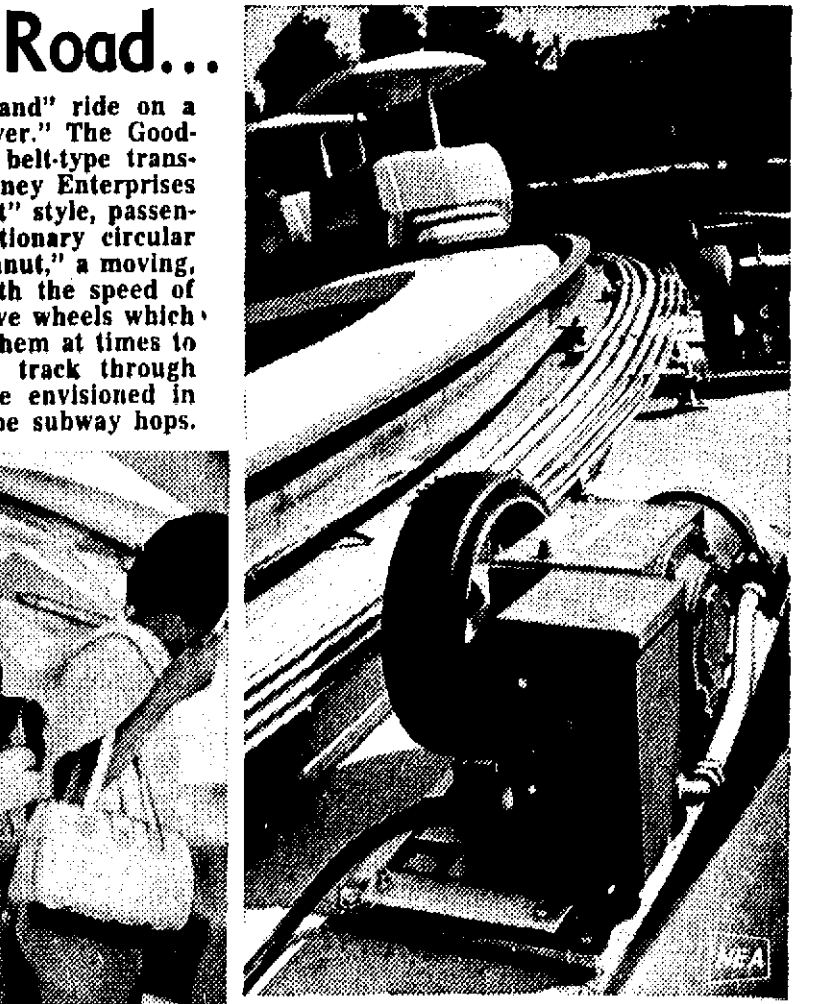

By FRANK O'NEAL

The Motors Are in the Road...

Visitors to Disneyland's new edition of "Tomorrowland" ride on a new concept of mass transportation: the "PeopleMover." The Goodyear-designed system is an outgrowth of its earlier belt-type transportation systems and the "WEDway," a Walt E. Disney Enterprises development. Entering the ride "hole in the doughnut" style, passengers step from moving, escalator-like belts to a stationary circular platform, and from it to the outer ring of the "doughnut," a moving, 90-foot-diameter ring. It, in turn, is synchronized with the speed of arriving trains. Motors at intervals in the roadway drive wheels which make contact with the bottoms of the cars, boosting them at times to 7 m.p.h. all along the 3/4-mile route of inulating track through "Tomorrowland." Commercial uses in the future are envisioned in shopping centers, airport terminals, short transfer-type subway hops.

Passengers for "PeopleMover" cars, right, step from a moving, 90-foot-diameter ring on which they're standing, into the cars. Ring moves at a sedate, synchronized-with-the-cars 1 1/2 m.p.h.

Motors are in the roads, not in the cars, on the "PeopleMover." Over 500 motor-driven wheels in the road-railway give cars a series of gentle boosts over the route through "Tomorrowland." There are 62 four-car trains in continuous operation. Nearly 5,000 passengers an hour can be handled on the "People-Mover," which is guarded by numerous safety devices.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Defense Slip Helps South

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

West's double of four spades is not recommended. He knows that South is in for some bad news in trumps but North and South have reached game with no strain at all and the double may give away the trump situation in time for declarer to guard against it.

It is a cardinal principle of bidding that you don't double when you may be jeopardiz-ing the setting trick.

The double didn't hurt this time. West was sure of his two trump tricks anyway, but he slipped in the defense later on.

South won the heart lead and decided to attack the diamond suit before going after trumps. West rose with his ace of diamonds and led a second heart. South trumped in dummy, cashed dummy's ace of trumps just in case
East might be holding one.
Then he started to play more diamonds. He discarded a club on the third diamond lead.

West ruffed and led a club.
South went right up with dummy's ace and discarded his last club on another diamond lead. West ruffed and led a second club but South was able to ruff in his own hand; draw trumps stopping in dummy and make the rest of the tricks with what was left of the diamond suit.

How could West have beaten the contract?

When he took his ace of diamonds he should have led a club rather than the second heart. Then when he ruffed for the first time he could have given his partner a club trick.

Q—The bidding has been:

| West | North | East | South |
|------|-------|------|--------|
| Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass | 2 N.T. |

What do you do now?

A—Bid five diamonds. There is a temptation to bid something more enterprising but you have bid your full values.

TODAY'S QUESTION
You bid five diamonds and your partner bids five spades.
What do you do now?

Ex-Olympic Champ Confident

By ROGER DOUGHTY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

KIAMESHA LAKE, N. Y.—(NEA)—The seams of the white T-shirt strained in a vain attempt to contain the huge biceps of the man who wants to be heavyweight champion.

Lying flat on his back, staring at the ceiling of his suite at the Concord Hotel here in the Catskills, Joe Frazier, former Olympic champ, extended a hand to a visitor and said, "Got to excuse the way the place looks. Maid hasn't been in yet."

It looked it. The hour was noon and Frazier, 23, with 16 straight victories, 14 by knockouts, was surrounded by the tools of his chosen trade. A crumpled sweatshirt tossed on a chair, a stack of dirty towels heaped on the floor that would frighten even the White Knight, along with a pile of boxing magazines, new but already worn out from having been read to death.

Frazier, who will face Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo in a scheduled 12-round July 19 at Madison Square Garden, had already put in a long day. With his road work done and his morning training ritual completed, the young Philadelphiaan had stripped to his underwear to sack out. In the afternoon he'd climb into the ring in the outdoor tennis court that has been converted to his gym, but that task was still hours away and Frazier was giving it less thought than a working stiff gives to what kind of sandwiches his wife will put in his lunch box. It's routine. He takes it as it comes.

"I'm not the worrying type," said Frazier. "I come to camp in condition. I stay sharp and I don't worry. If you were me maybe you'd be lying here thinking about the fight and how to beat Chuvalo, but that's not the way I work. My job is to be ready and to come out throwing smoke when the bell rings. I don't get paid to think or to worry about fights."

What Frazier was thinking about was his family. "Got a wife and three kids, you know, but I don't see them very much. I've had 16 pro fights and since I turned pro I've had a month, maybe two at the most, to be with my kids. Maybe the next time I see them they won't know I'm their daddy. That's the kind of thing I worry about."

Joe Frazier, the man who wants to be heavyweight champion, is not a complicated guy. He has confidence in his own ability and in the ability of the people who manage him. With Muhammad Ali out of the picture, Frazier thinks he's as good as anybody in the heavyweight division.

Kansas City Kiddie Kar Korps

KANSAS CITY—(NEA)—At various times during the season, Ellis (Cotton) Deal feels more like a scoutmaster than a pitching coach for the Kansas City A's.

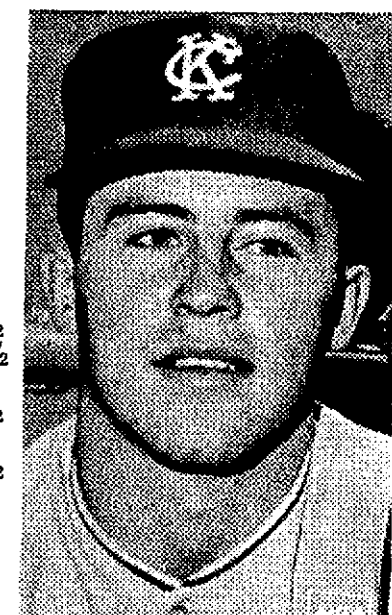

Cot has in his charge a group of young pitchers who could develop into one of the greatest staffs in the history of baseball.

"But," says Deal, "it will be up to them. There are no miracle workers in baseball."

His class includes Jim Nash, 22, who was 12-1 as a rookie last year; "Catfish" Hunter, 21, who already is in his third major league season; Blue Moon Odom, 21, 5-5 in half of a big-league season; and Chuck Dobson, 23, who has no geniuses. They have the potential, they must apply it. All I can do is counsel them, teach them and help them over the rough spots.

"The Kansas City pitching staff has a potential that has not been a trained yet. A pitcher does not reach maturity until he is 25 or 26."

A warning maybe... but not a prediction. Cot does not make predictions. He is a quiet gentleman, very factual, very precise, not given to exaggeration.

recovered from a sore arm. Those are the kids. The older guys are Lew Krausse, 24; Paul Lindblad, 25; and Jack Aker, 26, the American League's leading relief pitcher in 1966.

"They all have the physical equipment to be winning major league pitchers," Deal said. "But there is no guarantee that any will be a Whitey Ford. To be a Ford or a Sandy Koufax they'll have to develop a mechanical precision. The stuff on the ball isn't that important. It's the application."

This season, Deal said, Lindblad has been the A's best pitcher. "Last year," he added, "Nash was 12-1. A great year, but he had a lot of good fortune. This season, he hasn't been getting as many breaks."

"Krausse is the same. He's losing awfully tough games. This doesn't mean he's going downhill or anything like that."

"Hunter, I believe, is one of the outstanding pitchers in the league."

Deal has a precocious group which has been weaned at the major league level. Whether or not Mickey Mantle is the proper teething ring for a youngster is another question.

"The times dictate this," Deal said. "Baseball's present structure has brought it about because the minor league systems aren't as big now as they were before."

"This force-feeding can be good and it can be bad. I think it's hard on a young pitcher to be in the majors and take beating after beating because he does not have the proper experience."

"But every time an athlete—or anybody overcomes something, the person is better for it. He becomes stronger after he survives it."

It is that way with the A's pitchers. Hunter and Krausse started their careers in the minors. Odom had a half year in the minors, Dobson one, Lindblad two and Nash three.

When they came up, their theme song was "We Shall Overcome."

Now they have.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Jim Northrup, who once wanted to be a doctor and has the distinguished gray hair that goes with it, measures his baseball progress with an instinctive calibrator.

"This season," he says, "I don't feel tired going to the ball park."

And so the record shows that he is playing centerfield regularly for the Detroit Tigers, hitting .300 and generally establishing himself as a major leaguer and a vital force on a team with championship aspirations.

In 1965 and '66, his first two years in the majors, Jim showed a combined average of .242 and felt worn out by the All-Star break in July.

"And I didn't even play every day," he notes. "But, of course, I was up to my ears in baseball all year-round, playing winter league, averaging 265 games two years in a row. I got too tired."

Jim's compulsion to keep busy was due to an anxiety complex that has hounded him almost from the time he signed a professional contract with the Tigers in 1961. It was at the end of his junior year at Alma College in Michigan, where Jim was taking a premed course, majoring in biology and chemistry, minoring in football, basketball and baseball.

By sprinkling him with $12,000 spread over four years, the Tigers enabled him 1) to get married, 2) to support his bride. "With what I made in the minor leagues," he says, wryly, "I needed that money to live."

At the time, his hair already was beginning to turn gray. Northrup is 27 years old, and when he first was graduated to the Tiger roster two years ago, second baseman Jerry Lumpe started calling him The Gray Fox. The name has stuck, though Jim doesn't buy the implication.

"If I'd have been really smart," he grimaces, "I'd have gotten a lot more money, and they would have had to protect me."

By protection, he means the Detroit organization wouldn't have exposed him to a draft after his first year in organized baseball at Decatur, Ill., in 1961. Every team in the majors passed up a chance to draft Northrup for $25,000.

CHICAGO—(NEA)—Walt Williams is not the kind of guy who loses his head just because most people are of the opinion that he lacks enough neck to hold it in place.

Walt, better known as No-Neck around the American League, is a cheerful rookie outfielder of 23 from Brownwood, Tex., who doesn't mind answering to his nonsensical nickname as long as the Chicago White Sox keep him in the lineup.

"I can take anything," says Walt, "as long as I'm in the majors. People can call me anything they like, but I don't care. As long as I'm playing, I'm happy."

It's generally believed that Williams, who got started with the Houston organization, was tagged with his No-Neck handle by Astro catcher John Bateman. But Walt says the credit (or perhaps the word should be discredit, in this case) should go to George Kirksey, who played a large role in bringing big league

TRIPLE THREAT

'Gray Fox' Thought He Was Lost Cause

Keeps Head But Sticks Out Neck

CHICAGO—(NEA)—Walt Williams is not the kind of guy who loses his head just because most people are of the opinion that he lacks enough neck to hold it in place.

Walt, better known as No-Neck around the American League, is a cheerful rookie outfielder of 23 from Brownwood, Tex., who doesn't mind answering to his nonsensical nickname as long as the Chicago White Sox keep him in the lineup.

"I can take anything," says Walt, "as long as I'm in the majors. People can call me anything they like, but I don't care. As long as I'm playing, I'm happy."

It's generally believed that Williams, who got started with the Houston organization, was tagged with his No-Neck handle by Astro catcher John Bateman. But Walt says the credit (or perhaps the word should be discredit, in this case) should go to George Kirksey, who played a large role in bringing big league recovered from a sore arm. Those are the kids. The older guys are Lew Krausse, 24; Paul Lindblad, 25; and Jack Aker, 26, the American League's leading relief pitcher in 1966.

"They all have the physical equipment to be winning major league pitchers," Deal said. "But there is no guarantee that any will be a Whitey Ford. To be a Ford or a Sandy Koufax they'll have to develop a mechanical precision. The stuff on the ball isn't that important. It's the application."

This season, Deal said, Lindblad has been the A's best pitcher. "Last year," he added, "Nash was 12-1. A great year, but he had a lot of good fortune. This season, he hasn't been getting as many breaks."

"I don't know if I would have drafted me either," he admits, "because I was a free swinger. At the same time, I was always confident I could make it if I got the chance."

The chance. That was the crux of a long frustration. By passing him through the draft, the Tigers were able to send him out on option for four years while keeping players that Northrup felt were less worthy.

"I lived in doubt for years," he says, "because I knew they didn't have to keep me. It really worried me that I'd never get a chance. I looked at the Tiger outfield in those early days and thought I was a lost cause. They had Al Kaline, Rocky Colavito and Billy Bruton."

Even now that he has made his mark, Northrup has to live with the knowledge that the Tigers could still ship him three more times if they were so inclined.

"I could see myself in the minors until I was 27 or 28," he continues, "and then what would I have? I could forget about being a doctor. I could forget about pro football—I would really like to have a chance to go out and play (Northrup was a quarterback), but I realize it's too late now."

But the precariousness of Jim's position as he struggled through Decatur, Duluth, Knoxville and Syracuse had a compensation. He tried harder. "Guys who came along the same time, Willie Horton and Mickey Stanley, had major league contracts from the start," says Jim. "To stay with them, I had to do a lot better."

In 1964, he was voted the International League rookie of the year at Syracuse and pushed up to the varsity. Bruton had quit baseball; Colavito was traded. Only Kaline remained.

When Mayo Smith became manager of the Tigers this year, he put Northrup in centerfield, moved Kaline (who had played the middle) back to his normal position in right field, and stationed Horton in left.

All three have had phenomenal hitting spurts this spring. Kaline leads the American League in batting. Horton punched out seven homers in seven days. Northrup has delivered two grand slams.

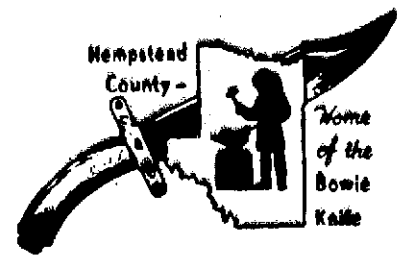

And the Gray Fox, who started the season obscure and hesitant, now predicts, "I think I can play another 10 years." Provided, of course, he doesn't feel tired again going to the ball park.

Williams, who was a Texas high school standout the last time the White Sox won a pennant in 1959, has some theories on the Sox and Stanky.

On Stanky, he says: "He's really something special. He may not be the easiest man to work for, but when he tells you that you've done a good job, you know he means it. You believe it. When he pats you on the back, you know you rate it. He doesn't waste praise."

On the Sox, Walt says: "People ask if we can go all the way this year and there's only one thing I can say. If we don't win, we're going to be so close that a lot of people are going to think we did win. You

2 Red Cross Planes Rescue 28 Americans

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
KINSHASA, The Congo (AP) — Two Red Cross planes brought 28 Americans and Europeans to Kinshasa from Kisangani Thursday night after mutinous mercenaries who had controlled the northeast Congo city for eight days fled.

One American, Mrs. Ben Hobgood of Lexington, Ky., said she thought two or three Europeans from Kisangani had accompanied the mercenaries. She also said she thought four Europeans had been killed after the mercenaries and rebellious Katangan troops took over the Kisangani airport and part of the city — formerly Stanleyville — on July 5.

The two C46 transport planes also carried 68 wounded Congolese army soldiers. Twenty-one of them were taken off on stretchers and taken to hospitals.

The flight of the mercenaries from Kisangani apparently ended the rebellion.

The military uprisings at Kisangani, Bukavu and Kindu followed the hijacking of a plane in Europe carrying former Premier Moise Tshombe. Tshombe has been held in Algeria since June 30 and the Congo, which sentenced him in Absentia to death for treason, has been trying to extradite him.

The mercenaries and Katangan soldiers are believed to be partisans of Tshombe, who led mineral-rich Katanga Province in an attempt at secession after the Congo got its independence from Belgium in 1960. As premier of the Congo in 1964, Tshombe used the mercenaries to quell a leftist rebellion in the northeast and they remained in the Congolese army after he was overthrown.

In Garden of Life Protect the Flowers, Throw Away the Weeds

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — To be content in the garden of life you have to protect your flowers and periodically throw away weeds.

Frutless ambitions are weeds. They must be discarded in time, or they'll choke your flowers—the things you really cherish.

It is amazing how the passage of years outdates ambitions that once seemed amazingly attractive. For example, in pursuit of this policy of weeding my garden, I've reviewed a list of old personal ambitions and decided I now longer have much of a desire to—

Plans Visit to Ft. Jackson

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A memory-filled visit to Ft. Jackson Army post is planned for Republican Sen. Everett Dirksen this afternoon before he speaks at a GOP fund-raising dinner in Columbia.

Fifty years ago, the 71-year-old Republican leader of the Senate went through basic training at Ft. Jackson, located on the outskirts of Columbia.

The Illinois senator's tour of the post includes an honor-guard ceremony at post headquarters. Dirksen enlisted in the Army to serve in World War I and saw action in France.

Cites Little Interest in Constitution

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller said Thursday that the people of Arkansas did not seem to have a "burning interest" in a constitutional convention.

Rockefeller said it was possible an amendment or initiated act would cover any needed changes in the state's 93-year-old constitution and that he "may recommend this."

Rockefeller, who was in Pine Bluff on one of his 14 regional tours of the state, told local legislators and county judges it was possible Vice President Humphrey may visit Arkansas to inspect the unique Young Citizens Camp for low income children.

The governor also announced that Arkansas is one of six states selected to take part in a pilot program to evaluate federal and state government relationships.

Rockefeller was asked what he was going to do about the differences between Prison Supt. O. E. Bishop and Asst. Prison Supt. Thomas O. Murton.

Insurance Head Strictly for People

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John Norman Harkey said Thursday he hoped that some insurance people "who are not acting in the interests of the people will realize that the honeymoon between the insurance industry and the Insurance Department is over."

Harkey, who has been in office 5½ months, said the certificates of four domestic life insurance companies have been revoked during that time but that if other companies fail to correct business practices more revocations would be forthcoming.

He said he felt that the revocation of only four certificates constituted "admirable restraint."

Directives requiring insurance companies to be explicit in their terminology regarding coverage have been issued by his department Harkey said in an interview taped for television viewing Sunday afternoon.

"The public has the absolute right to know exactly what they are buying and that's what the insurance companies are going to tell them," Harkey said.

Harkey said there are about 14,000 individual agents in Arkansas and that only about 30 per cent are actually engaged in the insurance business.

He said Arkansas has instituted an examination for life insurance salesmen in an attempt to upgrade the standards "so that only those who are qualified are licensed as agents."

Refugee Mob Levels Charges at Israeli

AIN GALLOUT, Egypt (AP) — A mob of bedraggled, angry Arab refugees surrounded foreign newsmen visiting their camp today and leveled charges at Israeli soldiers of murder, rape, arson and looting.

An Egyptian official accompanying the newsmen said a total of 8,689 refugees are being sheltered in Egypt, 2,500 of them children. They are Palestinians from the Gaza Strip and Egyptians from the Sinai region east of the Suez Canal.

They are being housed in five new villages in the new province of Al Tahrir being reclaimed from the desert between Cairo and Alexandria.

Thirty foreign newsmen were taken on a conducted government tour of the region. About 200 refugees pressed around them just outside the neatly laid out new village of Ain Gallout.

An Egyptian official said most of them had crossed from the Israeli-occupied side of the Suez Canal with only the clothes on their backs.

They all looked dirty, miserable and angry. Similar scenes occurred at other refugee villages visited by the newsmen.

Here is a random selection of their stories:

Sabha Mohammed, a pretty 16-year-old girl from the village of Bin El Abd, near El Arish in Sinai: "I ran away into the desert in the night when I saw Jews chasing other girls and forcing them against their will. I could hear them scream."

Middle East Battle Still In Progress

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Israeli jets shot down an Egyptian MIG21 near the Suez Canal today, an Israeli spokesman said, after an all-day Israeli-Egyptian battle of big guns along the canal killed at least 31 persons and wounded 66.

The United Nations starts sending observers to the canal today to try to halt fighting along the cease-fire line.

The spokesman in Tel Aviv said four MIGs crossed the canal near Ismailia and flew over Israeli-held soil on the east bank. He said two Israeli Mirage jets fought them.

The dogfight at Ismailia, about halfway up the canal, came an hour after Israeli planes had crossed to the west bank to strafe and silence Egyptian gun batteries at Port Ibrahim at the canal's southern end.

The spokesman said the Egyptians opened fire at Israeli soldiers trying to pick up the body of a soldier killed in Friday's fighting, which each side accused the other of starting.

Israel launched similar air attacks Friday to allow it to evacuate dead and wounded soldiers, it said, after other methods failed to silence the Egyptian artillery.

It said five Israeli soldiers were killed and more than 30 wounded by Egyptian artillery, mortars and tanks on the canal's west bank.

Old Rhyme May Be Applied

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Thirty days hath September, April, June and November.

This old rhyme came to mind Thursday with a narcotics violation arrest.

Police made the pinch on the basis of what they said were forged narcotics prescriptions. Two were dated June 31, 1967. And June hath only 30 days.

U.S. to Help British If Help Wanted

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is standing by, though as silently as possible, to help the hard-pressed British government pick up the pieces of its shattered warplane deal with France — if the British want U.S. help.

One outcome of the still developing political-military crisis centered in London could be heavy new British purchases of the U.S.-built supersonic fighter bomber, the F111.

But U.S. officials understand Britain's Labor government may prefer eventually a European solution to its problem of providing a suitable very high speed tactical strike-reconnaissance plane for the mid-1970s.

Central to the military and economic issues involved, including the future impact on Britain's aircraft industry, is an immediate political crisis which has jeopardized seriously the position of Defense Minister Dennis Healey. Debate on a motion of censure against the government over the plane issue is due in Parliament in a few days.

This political storm in Britain appears the main reason why U.S. officials prefer not to discuss the matter.

Privately, authorities here concede they are deeply concerned with the crisis and prepared to do what they can.

In Britain government critics have warned against any solution which would mean more profits flowing from Britain to U.S. corporations.

The problem suddenly developed last week when Healey announced to Parliament that France decided to withdraw from a year-old agreement for joint development of a British-French swing-wing plane serving a number of military purposes — a European counterpart of the F111. One major consideration, experts here noted, was to keep aircraft industries busy in the two countries.

You Need Not Go Far to Meet Nice Folks, They Are in This Area

It was a warm summer morning when we left home. There had been a threat of rain earlier, but it had soon passed. At the terminal there was a brief delay because of connections, we were told, but at last we climbed aboard.

Our transportation was very continental and our fellow-travelers most congenial. Our accents were the same, so there was no barrier to conversation. Soon, a panorama of lovely countryside stretched out before us.

Going south in the summer would have meant increased heat, but thanks to the miracles of air conditioning this was not a problem. The man in charge of the trip was in familiar terrain, and as we passed through a farming area, there were many distant

Engineers in Plea for Safe Boating

The thousands of individuals who plan to visit Corps of Engineers lakes were cautioned today by Col. George A. Rebh, Tulsa District Engineer, to observe safety rules while swimming and boating.

Col. Rebh said the Corps of Engineers is deeply concerned with the number of drownings which have occurred so far this year. He said 12 persons have drowned in Corps Reservoirs since March 19 of this year, with seven of the fatalities taking place during the month of June.

"So many drownings at the very beginning of the vacation season should serve as a warning—otherwise, many more lives will be lost if we do not make a special effort to insure that everyone who uses the reservoirs, knows and observes the basic rules of water safety and courtesy afloat," Col. Rebh said.

He said an analysis of the 313 drownings which have occurred at Tulsa District reservoirs from 1944 through 1966 shows:

- That 42.8 percent of the fatalities were connected directly with some kind of boating activities;
- That 36.1 percent of the drownings were connected with swimming or wading;
- That 1.0 percent of the drownings were connected with SCUBA or skin diving;
- That 18.5 percent of the drownings were caused by such reasons as being intoxicated, working over water without life preserver, motor cars rolling or being driven into lakes, etc.

He said records in the Tulsa District Safety Office shows the disturbing statistic that throughout the years 11 fatalities have resulted from swimmers and boat operators drinking intoxicating liquors. Additionally, intoxication was indicated, but could not be confirmed, in many other drowning and boating fatalities.

"The number of visitors to Corps of Engineers lakes throughout the United States was 193 million in 1966, an increase of 25 million over 1965," Col. Rebh noted. "Boating activities in this country has more than doubled in the past decade. In some places, there are 10 times as many boats as there were in 1957. With the safety of so many persons involved, there is no room for boating customs, horseplay, drinking of intoxicating liquors, water skiing in an unsafe manner, or any kind of foolishness on Federal lakes."

Following is a listing of drownings and boating fatalities at each project:

1967 (As of 15 June) — Denison Dam and Reservoir 2; Fort Gibson 1; Hulah 1; Keystone 2; Oologah 1; Tenkiller 4; and Toronto 1. Total 12.

Years 1944 through 1966 — Canton 12; Council Grove 0; Denison 137; Elk City 0; Eufaula 9; Fall River 14; Fort Gibson 54; Fort Supply 5; Great Salt Plains 15; Haysburg 8; Hulah 11; John Redmond 3; Keystone 6; Millwood 4; Oologah 5; Tenkiller 17; and Toronto 5. Total 313.

The following reservoirs had one or more drownings the year the reservoir was impounded: Denison, Eufaula, John Redmond, Millwood, Oologah, and Toronto.

exchanges of friendliness such as smiles, waving hands, and, whenever possible, a Hi said with the nod of the head.

Not many miles passed by without several pretty sights for the beholder. The lush acres of cropland in full production made one wonder why it was possible to read of starvation elsewhere in our world. It was certainly not the case in the land through which we passed. Wonder if the natives realized their good fortune?

The trip wasn't so slow it was boring or so fast it was dangerous. After the week's work, it was relaxing. Every precaution was taken for the safety and comfort of all on board.

Though that is commendable, sometimes a short delay is the result in order to prevent a long one. Fortunately, such a difficulty occurred as we approached a small community, so it was possible to purchase cold refreshment there and soon we were again on our way.

The passengers presented a wide variation of personalities. There was a red-haired girl with green, polka - dotted pedal - pushers who solemnly chewed gum throughout the trip; a preacher in his Sunday suit presented a more sedate appearance perhaps in keeping with the meeting he was about to hold; two of opposite age but with parallel restrictions were the crippled women who were assisted on board; a career girl on a holiday, two workmen in freshly washed overalls, a happy woman in a red straw hat, and a troubled-looking young man are others we could mention.

No world problems were solved, no earth-shattering discoveries were made, no paragraphs for history were written. In retrospect, perhaps a 90-mile trip isn't even worth mentioning. But it took place in our favorite part of the country—Southwest Arkansas. You don't have to go far to meet nice people, and, after all, in many ways life is what you make it. But on a bus, it's up to the driver.

Military Man Best Chance in Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Despite the collapse of their early favorite for the presidency, amid a power struggle in the military junta, U.S. officials believe a military man has the best chance of succeeding in South Vietnam's top job.

Whatever the personal preferences of the policy makers, few observers can dispute their basic assumption that the military is the largest political force in the anti-Communist struggle here and that no government can expect to rule effectively without military support.

Also, some U.S. sources have expressed belief that many of the civilian politicians have shown themselves far out of touch with the realities of the war in the countryside and what must be done to gain the peasants' allegiance.

There is always the danger that any civilian president would be toppled in a coup. Such action would destroy the government's legitimacy, which U.S. policy considers an absolute must if the peasants are expected to rally to the government side and if the new regime is to earn respect abroad.

Since the dramatic and unexpected ouster of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky from the presidential race last month, the U.S. mission here is believed to be operating a good deal more cautiously. Ky was front runner in the race until Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu won support from key members of the military junta in a masterful power play. Thieu is a lieutenant general in the army, while Ky is an air vice marshal.

The U.S. mission, while taking a hands-off stance publicly, had been working actively behind the scenes for Ky on the grounds that he was most likely to win. Thieu's presidential candidacy was considered a threat to military unity, and the U.S. mission put pressure on the chief of state to withdraw. The mission's support of Ky may lead to difficulties in U.S.-Vietnamese relations if Thieu wins.

Red Rockets Blast Base at Da Nang

By ROBERT TUCKMAN
SAIGON (AP) — The military U.S. air base at Da Nang was reeling today from a Communist rocket attack that left 8 Americans dead, 173 wounded and 42 airplanes crippled or wrecked at a cost of $80 million.

It was the worst punishment inflicted on the U.S. base which has been hit twice in the past five months.

Earlier, 13 Americans had been reported killed, but five Marines at first presumed dead were accounted for.

The sprawling 1,600-acre base on South Vietnam's northern sea coast, launching pad for many of the bombing raids on North Vietnam, was shut down immediately after the attack. Crews went out to repair one badly cratered 10,000-foot runway and sweep debris off of another.

Six F4C Phantom jets, each worth nearly $2 million, were destroyed and 10 more were heavily damaged. Two Marine F8 Crusader jets and three Air Force C130 cargo planes were wrecked in the five-minute Communist barrage of 120mm and 140mm rocket fire Friday.

It was the third raid on the base in the last five months and, said one U.S. spokesman, "the worst."

Man Can Make Out Fine on Vegetables

By LAWRENCE JANOWSKI
CHICAGO (AP) — Man may not be able to live on bread alone, but he can make out quite well, thanks, on fruits, vegetables, nuts and dairy products. At least that's how members of the American Natural Hygiene Society feel about it.

In fact, members consider some other foods quite literally "poison." These include some pretty popular items — meat, fish, liquor, beer, commercial products.

Their diet must be supplemented by an entire program of hygienic practices including regular exercise, sunbathing, rest and even fasting.

The group's 19th annual convention in Chicago, a nine-day meeting, has attracted health enthusiasts from across the country. "Many feel they are alive today only because of their faithfulness to the program."

Director Jack Trop, 67, said that he and many other members came over to the natural hygiene way as a last resort. "A number of these people — as well as I — were told by doctors that we had only a short period of time to live," he said.

The audience looked very lively indeed. There were no fannies in the crowd and several of the elderly people were remarkably alert and energetic.

Trop continued, "We offer no magic potions. We believe the only way to get well is to behave yourself. There is no secret. Our plan is as old as the hills. A little wisdom and the wonderful powers of the human body are enough to take care of you."

Although Trop said the group is not opposed to medical men or medical practices, hygienists would rather try conservative measures before submitting to drugs or surgery.

He hastened to add that the program could not, of course help individuals suffering from terminal diseases.

He did, however, say that "the group considers disease not an enemy, but a friend, a warning. The body is saying, 'lie down, relax — to give me a chance to straighten you out'."

Bookie Glad He Was Caught

NEW YORK (AP) — "In a way I'm glad to take the fall," said Robert de Simone as he was arrested for bookmaking. "I lost $10,000 on the National League yesterday."

He was seized Thursday by hippie-dressed detectives who had staked out his office on Union Square.

The hippie outfits were to avoid detection while casing what the police said was a $30,000-a-day operation.

Let's Keep On Being Human

The graduating class of a high school in Charlotte, N.C., heard a word of caution from its commencement speaker that might well be passed along to students and their elders—everywhere.

"The danger facing civilization today," Chancellor D. W. Colvard of the Charlotte campus of the University of North Carolina warned the graduates, "is not in machines becoming more human, but in man becoming more and more like a machine."

The chancellor, if he will forgive an unacademic expression, said a mouthful. Day by day, it seems, modern living is becoming more and more mechanized, more impersonal, unpeopled and numberish. It's not only those blinkety-blink computers but the trend toward treating human beings as numbers instead of persons. And while this may be extremely efficient, it's also coldly dehumanizing. No one warms up to someone who calls him by number or, in more tender moments, by the cuddly salutation of "Occupant." Or even "Boxholder."

What Chancellor Colvard was telling the high school graduates was not to permit themselves to be so caught up in the space age pace that they forget that they have something no machine can have — human warmth. LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Federal Judge Oren Harris dismissed a lawsuit Thursday filed by six Negro teachers at Gould and said the matter should "never had been brought into this court."

Harris made his decision after hearing five hours of testimony. He called the case a "frivolous matter" and said he was convinced it had "nothing to do with the question of civil rights."

The six teachers were dismissed at the end of the 1966-67 school year. They contended they were dismissed as a result of racial discrimination.

John W. Walker, a Little Rock attorney, said he would file an appeal with the U. S. Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis. Walker represented the six teachers.
